

China Chemical Energy Internet solves household registration

Using data from the 2019 China Household Finance Survey, this study empirically examines the effect of household digital transformation on household ...

China has further improved its household registration system to promote new urbanization and comprehensive rural vitalization, but there are ...

Using data from the 2019 China Household Finance Survey, this study empirically examines the effect of household digital transformation on household energy efficiency.

This paper utilizes the time-varying Difference-in-Differences (DID) model to evaluate the causal effect of digital transformation on HEC within China's households.

China has further improved its household registration system to promote new urbanization and comprehensive rural vitalization, but there are certain constraints that still need to be addressed ...

This study aims to use micro household data in China to explore the impact and underlying mechanisms of Internet use on household energy ladder, and provide experience for other similar countries.

This paper contributes to the understanding of differences in environmental participation among urban residents who hold varying types of household registration (namely, hukou) identity.

This study examines how China's household registration system reform (HRSR) affects the sustainable income of migrant households by addressing institutional barriers within the urban-rural ...

The intrinsic mechanism result shows that although social interaction reduces the strength of the role of Internet use in rural household energy transition, it has not yet completely ...

This study empirically examines the impact and underlying mechanisms of internet use on household energy poverty by employing econometric methods and panel data from the China Family ...

After continual reforms, household registration reached new heights of lean management in the Ming and Qing dynasties, characterized by the institution of the Yellow Registers and the Fish ...

China Chemical Energy Internet solves household registration

Web: <https://cgaroofing.co.za>